

DEMOCRAT VICTORY SEEN BY RASKOB IF VITAL ISSUES FACED

Tariff and Prohibition Are Questions Which Must Be Decided By Party, Says New Yorker in Interview; Predicts End of Racketeering if Liquor Laws Are Revoked Through United States.

By JAMES L. KILGALLIN
NEW YORK, Apr. 20.—John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic national committee, foresees an smashing victory for the Democratic party in the national elections of 1932 if the party in its platform takes a clear-cut, unequivocal stand on the vital issues confronting the American people.

"I regard the tariff and prohibition questions as the most vital issues the Democratic party will have to deal with in its national platform," Mr. Raskob declared today in an exclusive interview with International News Service. "He quickly added, however, that this does not mean that other issues of 'grave importance' must be side-tracked."

Mr. Raskob paced the thickly carpeted floor of his office on the thirtieth floor of the New York Central building as he discussed the political situation at length. He is a well-built, middle aged man whose graying hair is combed straight back from a high, intellectual forehead. He was immaculately attired in blue, with blue linen to match.

"COMMIT THE PARTY"
"If the Democratic national convention will commit the party to giving the people themselves an opportunity of voting on the prohibition question and, in addition, will reduce to the simplest English its tariff policies—which I know to be constructive policies—I am confident the party will sweep the north and east, carry the south solidly and make tremendous gains in western states which usually find themselves in the Republican column at national elections," said Raskob.

Amplifying the assertion that he expects to win in 1932, Raskob pointed out that the Democratic party has done a lot of building since the 1928 race. Heretofore, he said, the Democrats have been quiescent between conventions "but this time we have built up a business organization which includes such live wires as Jovett House, Charlie Michaelson and Governor Ross."

WON'T QUOTE NAMES
Mr. Raskob refused to discuss prospective presidential candidates, declaring: "my job is to build up an organization that will elect the men the convention selects, not to dictate the selection." He also declined to discuss the alleged attempt of the Republican party to make Tammany an issue in the forthcoming campaign.

Into Raskob's voice came a ring of conviction when he asserted that the prohibition question "will have to be met." He thinks the people are entitled to know the position the Democratic party will take on that great American issue.

He pointed out that racketeering has become a tremendous and menacing "business" in this country, affecting the lives of every citizen. He said that if the government could collect the revenue on liquor sold illicitly today it would be sufficient to relieve all citizens from payment of federal income taxes.

Even the American farmer is hurt by the situation that has developed under prohibition, the

GOOD WEATHER CAUSE OF JOY

Farmers Rejoice When Substitute Crops Are Harvested Along With Warm Air.

COLUMBUS, O., April 20.—Up and down the drought areas of the state farmers are rejoicing at the early visit of summer-like weather which has brought them promise of relief from crop-losses suffered in hot and arid 1930.

The early warm-weather is expected to prove a big advantage to farmers in their attempts to recover from the hay shortage that struck the state when the weatherman turned his back on Ohio last July and August.

Though no warm weather can ever make up for the extreme failures of clover and grass seeds in the drought-stricken sections, the so-called "early summer" is expected to hasten substitute crops along to an early and bumper harvest.

Success of these crops depends upon the state soil moisture, about which there remains some doubt, according to R. D. Lewis, farm crops expert at Ohio State University. Some farm experts believe soil moisture is sufficient even now, others hold it to be inadequate.

FATHER KILLS 3 WITH CLUB

Deranged Man Then Commits Suicide; Marital Troubles Given As Cause.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., April 20.—A 70-year-old father, frantic over the refusal of his wife to return home, clubbed his three children to death and then committed suicide.

The victims of the domestic tragedy were Webster L. Wainwright, 70, and his three children, Rosalind 7, Richard 6 and Jacqueline, 4.

Their bodies were discovered today in the Wainwright home and police fixed the time of the murder and suicide as late Sunday.

Details of the murder and suicide were learned by police from letters left by Wainwright.

"Rosalind died at 4:30," "Richard died at 4:45," "Baby died at 5."

"Me at 5:33."

These cryptic notations were found on scraps of papers in Wainwright's handwriting.

"The worst sight I see," another note read "was when I clubbed Rosalind and Richard. They howled so loud I had to hang them so no one would hear them cry."

Another long letter was headed "The life of Marie Wainwright." In this note the husband charged his wife with leaving him.

Police reconstructing the crime said it was apparent that Wainwright had attempted to force strychnine down the throats of the children and that when they screamed he clubbed them to death.

He then wrote the series of notes and after completing them, fastened a noose about his neck and leaped from a second floor banister.

EXPECT BURKE PLEAD GUILTY

Alleged Murderer To Be Arraigned In Michigan Court Today.

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., April 20.—Fred Burke, outlaw, to whom police charged a multitude of crimes, including the famous St. Valentine Day massacre in Chicago, was expected to enter a plea of guilty in circuit court here today.

It is believed that Burke will admit the killing of Patrolman Charles Skelly, whom he shot and killed when the officer attempted to halt a car in which Burke was riding. The car figured in a small traffic accident.

Rewards of slightly more than $100,000 were on Burke's head when he was captured a month ago in Missouri. Extradited to Michigan for the Skelly murder he has been under heavy police guard here since. The man is described by police as "the most dangerous gangster in America."

RUSSIA WARNS UNITED STATES

Solemn Note Seen in Warning; Trouble Brewing Over Russian Exports.

MOSCOW, Russia, April 20.—A solemn warning was issued by the soviet dictator to the United States today to cease its discrimination against Russian products or take the risk of running into an outright Russian embargo of American commodities.

The comments followed promulgation of an official decree bidding all Soviet organization and trade representatives in foreign countries to buy any Canadian food or utilize Canadian shipping.

The newspaper "Red Star" discussing the new embargo in sound detail freely construed the order as a warning to the United States.

"Anti-Soviet mania in the United States," the newspaper declared, "must remember that those living in glass houses cannot throw stones."

We hope that Secretary of State Stimson in studying the "Russian Problem" will remember that ancient proverb.

YAPLE HURT IN ACCIDENT

Ross-Co Barrister Riding In Bob Criswell's Car, Injured Friday P.M.

L. B. Yaple, Chillicothe attorney and former judge of the Ross-Co common pleas court, suffered two broken ribs, numerous bruises and abrasions and an injury to his left arm which temporarily paralyzed it, in an automobile accident Friday evening on the Cincinnati-pk west of Bourneville.

Yaple was riding with Robert L. Criswell of the Boggs Hotel and was returning to Chillicothe after inspecting the office of the Highland-co Finance Co. in which they are partners. A colored boy who had accompanied them was asleep in the back seat of Criswell's Hudson sedan. Mr. Yaple was seated at the side of Mr. Criswell who was driving.

The Criswell car was allegedly struck head-on by a car driven by Charles Jones of Bainbridge when, heading west, the Jones car attempted to pass another machine and drove directly into the path of the Criswell Hudson. Criswell is said to have pulled to the edge of the road in an effort to evade an accident. Jones' car struck the Hudson on the left front damaging the engine, frame, body and fenders.

The Judge and Mr. Criswell were thrown forward. Shattered glass in the windshield saved them from being cut. Criswell suffered only a few abrasions.

Revolution of Major Proportions Disrupts Honduras Over Week-end

U. S. SHIPS ON HAND

Fighting Is Reported In Native Villages

WASHINGTON, April 20.—A revolution of major proportions broke out in northern Honduras early Sunday and reported spreading today throughout the northern coast provinces caused apprehension here for the safety of Americans and foreigners.

Three American war ships will be on the scene today.

The cruiser Memphis, dispatched from Puerto Cabezas, Nicaragua, early Sunday for Ceiba Honduras, after an appeal from American Vice-Consul Warren C. Stewart through American minister Julian G. Lay at Tegucigalpa, the capital, was due to arrive last night. On route she was ordered by radio to stop at Puerto Castillo.

ARRIVES TODAY

Two other cruisers left Guantanamo, Cuba, late yesterday and should arrive at their Honduran ports today. A third ship, the air carrier Langley, was ordered to Puerto Cabezas, Nicaragua, to take the place of the Memphis. One cruiser should arrive at Trujillo before night and the other at Puerto Cortes.

The ports threatened by the revolutionary forces, said to number 800 men under General Ramon Diaz, are Ceiba, Tela, Trujillo and Puerto Castillo.

The revolutionary movement, according to advices received here, started near Progreso, Honduras, and by Sunday morning was gaining headway. At that hour, General Diaz requested the use of a train on the "Tela" railroad, which he was refused, 300 revolutionists commandeered it and proceeded to Uraco, about 25 miles from Progreso, which later town was reported captured.

FIGHTING REPORTED

Fighting was reported near Saba, between the revolutionists and government troops from the Trujillo garrison.

The reports received here from Vice-Consul Fisher at Tela, indicated that after Progreso was captured, the revolutionists were advancing on Tela. Private advices received here said that Diaz was to meet with General Gregorio Ferrera, noted Honduran Rebel leader of former revolutions, at Progreso, and that they were to proceed to San Pedro.

The United Fruit Company was holding a steamer at Ceiba and sending other vessels there and to Castillo to take on women and children if necessary.

Orders to the Memphis to leave Puerto Cabezas, where she had arrived late last week to aid troops from the bandit regions of the east Nicaraguan coast, were issued shortly yesterday.

They were for the Memphis to proceed under forced draft to Ceiba.

Capt. G. J. Meyers, of the Memphis was instructed to limit his activities to making provision for the safety of lives and property of Americans and foreigners in the coast towns. Last night, on receipt of further appeals from Castillo, he was instructed to stop there before proceeding to Ceiba.

CORPORATIONS SHOW INCREASE

CLEVELAND, O.—Large representatives corporations in principal industries showed stronger operating positions in the 1930 depression than during the depression of 1921, despite the fact that business failures in 1930 broke all record in both numbers and liabilities, according to comparative studies announced by Ernst & Ernst, accountants.

The study, covering 407 leading corporations classified into 20 industrial lines, tends to show prominent companies were in a better sales and profits position in 1930 than in 1921.

For the period of 1930, as compared with the previous big depression of 1921, it is shown that in the aggregate the larger representative corporations had higher profit margins on sales, larger sales in relation to inventories, smaller inventories in relation to net plant investment, larger sales in relation to net plant investment, and larger profits in relation to capital investment, the statement said.

"All of these are favorable factors and serve to suggest that management of the larger companies has improved materially in the past ten years," it was said.

"The study also raises doubts as to whether plants of the larger corporations are as much over-expanded as it is generally assumed."

"Certainly their plants are in better position as regards profits, sales and inventories than 10 years ago. A previous study showed that corporations generally were in relatively more liquid position, with larger cash resources and lower current liabilities at the end of 1930 than at the end of 1921."

This suggests that the corporate credit situation is now over-extended."

The findings in the study of the two depression periods were:

Net profits in 1920 were 5.02 per cent, declining in 1921 to 4.1 per cent, whereas, in 1929, the profits were 9.31 per cent, declining in 1930 to 5.70 per cent, a smaller decline than in the earlier depression, and a higher level at the end of the "bad year of 1930" than existed at the end of the "good year of 1920."

Sales were 4.24 times inventories in 1920, and 4.14 times in 1921, whereas they were 4.24 times in 1929 and 5.21 times in 1930, showing a smaller decline and a higher level in the latter depression.

Inventories were 41 per cent as much as net plant investment at the end of 1921, but only 33 per cent at the end of 1930.

Net profits were 1.39 per cent of capital investment in 1921, but rose to 6.49 per cent in 1930.

The 20 lines classified were: automobiles, auto parts, beverages, and confections, building materials, chemicals, coal mining, food products, iron and steel, machinery and tools, merchandising, metal products, mining and smelting, oil producing and refining, paper and paper products, railroad equipment, rubber, textiles, tobacco, wearing apparel, and miscellaneous industries.

Theaters

AT THE MET

"The greatest tragedienne on the screen—and she insists on waiting her talent on comedy." Thus did Erich Von Stroheim sum up his opinion of Zasu Pitts after they had completed "The Wedding March" a couple of years ago.

Today Miss Pitts is ranked as one of the finest comedy actresses on the screen, the days when she played tragedy are a thing of the past, and her "sad" face and voice have become a part of her, insofar as audiences are concerned.

In her latest production, "Free Love," which Universal recently completed and which comes to the Met Theatre Monday, Miss Pitts is seen as a maid in the household of Genevieve Tobin and Conrad Nagel.

AT THE CLIFTONA

Three of the featured players in Buster Keaton's last talkie, "Dough Boys," appear with the comedian again in his newest laugh-maker, "Parlor, Bedroom, and Bath at the Cliftona."

They are Cliff Edwards, who scored in the earlier film as a bored private, and who now appears as a hotel bellhop; Sally Eilers, who married Keaton in the war comedy but who hands him over to Dorothy Christy in the new farce; and Edward Brophy, who makes a quick transformation from a hard-boiled top sergeant to an equally hard-boiled detective.

Members of the cast who have never before appeared with Keaton include Reginald Denny, Charlotte Greenwood, Joan Peers, Natalie Moorhead, Walter Merrill and Sidney Bracy.

Edward Sedgwick, who screened "Dough Boys," also directed "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath."

AT THE GRAND

Unvarnished applause is greeting Winona Lightner and the all star cast now appearing at the Grand theatre in "The Life of the Party," the new Warner Bros. and Vitaphone comedy in technical color. Others in the play are Irene Delroy, Charles Butterworth, Charles Judis, Jack Whiting, John Davidson and Arthur Hoyt. The up-to-the-minute wise-cracking dialogue is by Arthur Caesar. Roy Del Bath, who directed "Miss Lightner in Gold Diggers of Broadway" and "Hold Everything," directs "The Life of the Party" portrays the ludicrous adventures of Flo and Doc, New York song pluggers, who incorporate as professional gold diggers and conduct operations on sugar daddies in Havana.

You may misunderstand love, but you can never underestimate it.

COLITIS A COMMON AND INCREASING AMERICAN

A century ago Colitis was almost unknown. In certain parts of the world the disease is still rare. But in the United States, Colitis is becoming so common that it threatens to soon become almost universal if it is not checked. Often whole families are affected and some authorities on diseases of the Colon (large bowel), believe the disease to be communicable.

WHAT IS COLITIS?

Colitis is a chronic infection of the Colon (large bowel). It begins in the mucous membrane lining the Colon and may involve merely a small area or may extend to the entire Colon. At the beginning it is superficial, but in severe and chronic cases the infection may extend to the deeper structures of the Colon, involving the entire thickness of the intestinal wall, its covering, and even the surrounding tissues and organs which come in contact with it, such as, the stomach, liver, spleen, uterus ovaries and bladder. In the most aggravated cases ulceration and hemorrhages may occur.

Persons who suffer from colitis may have either frequent or infrequent stools. In many cases there is an alternation of constipation and diarrhea. In advanced cases the bowel movements may be very frequent. In a case recently under the writer's observation the bowels moved nearly every hour, yet the colon was never empty. The frequent discharge is often simply an overflow from a paralyzed and over-distended colon.

Some of the symptoms of and conditions associated with colitis are headaches, coated tongue, foul breath, indigestion, nervous dyspepsia, sluggish liver, mental depression, soreness throughout the abdomen, palpitation of the heart, hemorrhoids both blind and bleeding, appendicitis, etc., etc.

In an article, to appear in another issue I shall attempt to enumerate some of the causes of colitis.

WORTHLESS LAND IS HIGHLY PRIZED

YOUNGSTOWN, O.—"Why in the world did Curtis B. Clay pay $650 for that no-good, moss-covered, wooded piece of land between those two hills?" Youngstown people have been asking each other since Clay bought 13 acres of "no good" land near Canfield, a suburb.

But now the secret is out and Clay, a florist, has 13 acres of peat moss, worth about $2,400,000, according to government figures.

Peat moss is a rare form of fertilizer used only on golf greens and rich men's lawns, and retails at $4 a bale. Government estimates place the number of bales that cover his land at 600,000.

While roaming about the hollows where undertakers had been wont to gather Spaghnum moss, Clay discovered the peat moss and then quietly bought the site.

Peat moss ordinarily is imported from Germany. In only a few instances have duplicates been found in this country. Government tests have shown Clay's moss to be an exact duplicate of the German peat moss.

FARMERS MEET TO FIGHT TAX

COLUMBUS, O.—Farmers all over the state are organizing to compel the Ohio general assembly to heed their demands in the drafting of a new taxation system.

Twenty-two sectional meetings held by the Ohio Farm Bureau are planned for the specific purpose of evaluating the efforts of the legislature to solve taxation and appropriation problems.

In every meeting the rural demand for a state income tax with relief for the farmer indirectly provided will be pushed.

Meetings scheduled in the near future are April 21—Carrollton and Napoleon, April 22—Cambridge and Elroy, April 23—Somerset and Monroeville, April 24—Gallipolis and Medina, April 25—Williamstown.

L. J. Palmer, president of the Ohio Farm Bureau hopes to acquaint farmers with progress made by the legislature at the series of meetings. Palmer will speak at one meeting each day and Edwin J. Bath, of Columbus, the bureau's legislative director, will speak at the other.

They will advise the farmers of steps necessary to obtain the legislation they desired.

24 HOUR COAST TO COAST TRIP

COLUMBUS, O. — Twenty-four hour coast-to-coast flights between New York and Los Angeles via Port Columbus will be inaugurated Monday by the Transcontinental and Western Air, Inc.

The company operates regular air mail service between the two cities. The time for the flight under the new schedule is half that required when the company started operating July 9, 1929.

Shifts Are Seen On State's Grid

COLUMBUS, O., April 20.—Out at the Hoosier that Harley Built, as the writer affectionately calls it in an odd moment at home when he finds time for tender reverie, strange, strange, operations are being performed upon what remains of the Ohio State football team.

Taking advantage of that part of common law which allows football coaches, like care-free and indiscriminate young men's fancies, to do rare stunts at any time after March 21, Coach Sam Willman has instituted a program of plastic surgery that will surprise even the oldest subscribers when the season opens next fall.

For one thing Mister Willman has installed a thirst for power and distinction in the soul of a nice young fellow whose ambitions never before carried him beyond dreams of a regular varsity center position and now the chappie is bent on becoming one of these fleet-footed, pass-snatching, touch-down-gathering ends.

The bright young men who loll on the nearby greensward and speculate about the nation's problems while Coach Willman drives his boys on in their daily romp will pill themselves up on their elbows at almost any time to tell you that Ex-center Bert Nasman is trying to become an end because All-American Wesley Fesler is done.

As qualified as anyone to pay no attention at football practice and yet never be at a loss to offer expert opinion on any detail, your correspondent hoists himself on a straight-arm at this point to ask what Fesler's going-away has to do with the rebuilding of Carl Ehrensberger, another center, into a guard.

Mr. Willman herein having pulled his two best centers from their regular positions and inserted them at points in the Buckeye wall, this would seem to be an admission, or at least a suspicion, that Ohio

State line material isn't what it was when you and I were on the squad.

This, however, cannot be verified and perhaps it would be better for us to wait developments and say nothing more about it until fall, when, if it is true, we can write a letter of complaint to some sport writer.

Nasman and Ehrensberger being busy at end and guard respectively, the center position has been left to Dick Smith, East Chicagoan, who broke into several games last season.

In what resembles another hint of vulnerability in the Willman line, Martin Varner, Lima "half-back, is getting a workout at guard, his transfer being part of a suspected general plot to sneak up on the alumni anvil chorus next fall with an unblemished record, a low-down trick, which the alumni would resent so much they would immediately elect Willman governor and vote him 50 per cent of the state tax receipts.

Two strapping freshmen who are so big and healthy that they have caused immeasurable worry to fraternity cooks also aspire to be Fesler's followers. Wilmer Hosket, Dayton Stivers basketball star for three years, and Fred Conrad, Wooster cage flash, both are candidates for end positions.

Joe Bens of Cleveland is reported by his friends and fraternity brothers to be a certain quarterback choice although this word hasn't reached Willman, it is understood.

Besides Fesler, Coach Willman also must replace his other star end, Dick Larkins, and Selby and Bill Griffith, giant guards before the first game. Two or three others now ineligible are expected to be back in good standing when the season opens.

PLAN REGATTA

CLEVELAND, O., Featuring the annual Put-In-Bay regatta, 19 water events will comprise the summer program for the Cleveland Yachting Club.

The Put-In-Bay regatta is the most attractive of all of the summer events held in the Ohio waters of Lake Erie. It will be staged this year on July 13 to 18. Next in importance is the long distance classic for the W. F. Thompson trophy, September 5, 6, and 7 the boats traveling to Port Stanley and return.

The yachting club season will be inaugurated officially on May 30 with the squadron sail.

The club cruise this year will be held on July 4 and 5. On July 11 and 12 the Winton cup race will be run off. The season will be ended on September 20 with the fifth club series race.

HOLE-IN-ONE

IN 1st ROUND
FREMONT, O., Playing his first round of golf this season, Herbert Hock, Clyde golfer, joined the Hole-In-One Club when his drive rolled neatly into the cup on the No. 5 hole at Fremont Golf Club here.

His feat was the first Hole-In-One ever scored on the club course.

SEES FIGHT

CINCINNATI, O., Governor George White was recently an interested spectator at a ten-round bout here between Freddie Miller, Cincinnati featherweight, and Tommy Paul of Buffalo. Miller won the match.

And the cheerful loser may be trying hatefully to diminish your joy by licking him.

De Mar—Father Time's Rival

From all accounts Pheidippides, the Greek, who carried the good news from Marathon to Athens in 490 B. C. was a youth. History does not state his age but he must have been a young fellow because he dropped dead on his arrival. Had he been a comparatively old fellow like Clarence De Mar, for example, he would probably still be running. De Mar recently celebrated his forty-third birthday by training for what he hopes will be his eighth Boston Marathon victory on April 19th. Acclaimed the greatest Marathoner of all time De Mar won the event in 1911, 1922, 1923, 1924, 1927, 1928 and 1930. A victory this year will mark the twentieth anniversary of his first and all Massachusetts is rooting for the "Old Man of Melrose," but none more ardently than his bride of a year.

Fall Of Robins Rocks National

NEW YORK April 20.—Brooklyn's five straight defeats, four of which were inflicted by Boston's peppery Braves, constitute the outstanding upset of the infant baseball season which goes into its second week today.

As far as the other clubs are concerned, however, the advance "slope" has been correct. The Washington Senators and St. Louis Cardinals figured to possess the best balanced pitching staffs in their respective circuits, have shown the greatest defensive strength and are leading the parade.

The Senators have allowed the opposition only 11 runs in five games. Nineteen runs have been scored against the Athletics and Yankees and 20 against Cleveland.

The Cardinal pitchers have yielded 15 runs, the Giants 22 and the Cubs 23. The Giants led the National League in offensive strength by scoring 46 tallies.

Walberg and Grove have been pitching fine ball for the Athletics but Hank McDonald, the 19-year-old rookie upon whom Connie Mack is counting heavily, was unable to go the route in his first start.

Wiley Moore, former sinker ball expert of the Yankees who now sports the livery of the White Sox contributed the pitching classic of the week. Knocked out of the box by his former mates on opening day, the genial farmer came back on Saturday and blanked the Yanks with three hits in the last nine frames of a 15-inning game. Only three shutout games were pitched—by Burleigh Grimes of the Cardinals, Lloyd Brown of Washington and Clint Brown of Cleveland.

Four pitchers already have won two games. They are Root of the Cubs, Stewart of the Browns, Fitzsimmons of the Giants and McKain of the White Sox.

Root and Hadley, of Washington, turned in four hit games. Five-hit performances were contributed by Lefty Grove, Ed Brandt of the Braves and Bill Walker of the Giants.

The suspicion seems to be growing that the new "snail" ball is going to cause a cut in batting averages this season, although there has been no appreciable decrease in the home run output.

After a rather rocky start, the pitchers have begun to find their stride. Twenty-eight out of 82 starting pitchers, or about one out of three, have managed to go the route and approximately 25 of them have turned in highly creditable performances.

Brooklyn's pitchers are a striking exception. Curiously enough, Dazzy Vance, the last of the bunch to report, has made the best showing of any Robin hurler to date. Injuries to Wright and Thompson have shattered the club's infidel but Uncle Wilbert Robinson's nephews are sure to be in the thick of the fight as soon as their full strength is available.

GREAT MENTOR NEVER PLAYED

Wooster College's Coach, L. C. Boles, Is Distinguished Golfer However.

WOOSTER, O., Although he has turned out several Ohio conference champion football teams during his regime at Wooster College, Coach L. C. Boles has never played football himself.

But while the Wooster mentor never carried a pigskin for his alma mater, he has distinguished himself at golf, being ranked among the ten best players in the Cleveland district, and now, Wooster folks are asking, if Boles, never having played football can turn out champions, what will he do as a coach of golf teams.

The entrance of Wooster into the field of collegiate golf has just been announced and the "old man" as his assistants refer to Boles, has taken it upon his broad shoulders to inject the fine points of the Scottish game into the driving and putting of the Presbyterian club welders.

All local matches are to be played on the grounds of the Wooster Country Club.

Roe Withrow of Spring Valley, Cleveland, who won honors in the Cleveland district junior tournament last year, is Boles' best prospect. Other candidates for the team are Bruce Theobald of Napoleon, Charles Siegenthaler of Mansfield, Gail Lathrop of Toledo; Ken James of Willard; John Exter of Oak Lawn, Ill.; Howard Nore of Lorain; Jerry Lippincott of Cleveland and Dick Aldrich of Elvira.

HOG WORKMAN

MIGHT GO HOME

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Harry "Hog" Workman, former Ohio State University backfield star and one of the ranking forward passers of all time, may return to his home city high school as director of athletics and head coach.

Workman is expected to file an application for the position which is vacant, since the board of education declined to re-appoint Hal Stutz.

Although Workman is now coach at Simpson College, Indianola, Ia., he recently resigned the position, effective at the end of the present semester.

Refusal of the board to give Stutz the job again has resulted in a strike of protest from students here, including Claude Parker, this year's captain, and Eddie King, captain a year ago. Hundreds of names have been signed to petitions demanding that he be retained.

Ed Crow, assistant coach, also has been mentioned as a possible successor to Stutz.

At Ohio State Workman was a star in football, basketball, baseball and track. He was easily the greatest athlete ever developed at Huntington High school.

LORAIN INVITES HEAVY FIGHTERS

LORAIN, O., Max Schmeling, heavyweight champion, and William "Young" Strubling, principals in the championship bout to be staged in Cleveland's new stadium probably July 3, have been invited to Lorain to train for the clash.

Members of the Lorain Lions Club sent both boxers a telegram, informing them of the advantages of selecting Lorain as training headquarters. An old camp, formerly used by John Kilbane, former world's welterweight champ, as a boxing camp, is available as a training site, the message said.

New York Man May Be Hoover Secretary

Oscar Solbert, formerly military aide to Calvin Coolidge when he was President, is mentioned as the next secretary to President Hoover, succeeding George Akerson, Solbert, who held the rank of colonel and has a splendid war record, is now in business in Rochester, N. Y.

CASEY HITS 37 SCORE

Golf Pro Scores One Over Par In First Nine-Hole Trip This Season.

Woe be to the golfers of central Ohio if Frank Casey, Pickaway Country Club's professional improves with age.

Saturday afternoon on his first round after cups were sunk in the country club's greens, the popular pro shot a 37 nine-hole score. His woods and irons were both clicking and his putter which prevented him from breaking 70 several times last year, was acting like a trained implement.

His score, tallied in company with Les Harrop of Columbus, and Karl Herrmann, was 5-3-4-5-4-4-4-3.

"MURDER AT EAGLE'S NEST" By WINIFRED VAN DUZER

"Bim" Martin, young newspaper reporter and her fiancé, Walter Vance, assistant police chief, are baffled by the murder of Baroness von Wiese at Eagle's Nest and the theft of her jewels. The outstanding suspects are the butler, who denies receiving a note from the Baroness, her maid with whom she quarreled, and Mary Frost, whose shawl was wrapped around the body. Mary left the party with her husband, Ted, returning alone, later, for the shawl. According to the maid, Laura Allan had borrowed it. Laura claims she saw Mary enter the garden wearing the shawl. Bim feels that Mary is shielding Ted who flirted with the Baroness. A stone from a man's ring is found in the garden. Carl Carey, New York City reporter, arrives at Circleville. "Bim" is attracted to him. His implications regarding Laura Allan prompt "Bim" to investigate. She learns that Laura entertained Bunny Baird late at night. The imprints of the woman's shoes in the garden fit those of Emily Hardy, the hostess. "Bim" sees the butler dancing and wonders about him. Mary Frost confides that Ted left the party alone while she waited on the terrace and then returned for her shawl. As she left she saw Laura Allan wearing it.

CHAPTER XXIII.

BIM SET out for the village, walking along very slowly, very thoughtfully, with Mary's distracted wail echoing in her ears. "How does anyone know what Ted may do when he's drinking?"

How indeed! Ted Frost could be so affable when he wished but was so reckless, so scornful of all restraint when he was not himself—what wild, terrible thing might not Ted, inflamed by alcohol and by rage, do?

Nor could it be Bim—nor anyone else for that matter, as she told herself—suspected Ted to be implicated in the murder of the Baroness von Wiese. Yet it remained conceivable that he might know who was implicated; that after he dashed away in a fury from his wife on the night of the killing he might have seen something, heard something, which would throw a light on the mystery. He had refused to be questioned and this was not in his favor.

No Open Humiliation

Bim wondered all at once just how genuine was Ted's reformation of the past year. Mary had said, "He's seemed different for a long time—no open humiliation for me."

Did she mean that Ted had been carrying on in secret and that she suspected it? And why, after Mary's meek patience with the most flagrant conduct on her husband's part, had she been so upset by the mid attention he paid the Baroness?

It appeared, Bim concluded, that the beautiful Baroness was one of those women who either inadvertently or carelessly manage to arouse the antagonism of all other women. She, herself, had not been exempt; she remembered the impulse to reach out and claw the Baroness' lovely, indifferent shoulder upon being presented to that snooty lady.

And she had seen cold dislike in Laura's face for Bim's guest of honor while even Bim, who seldom allowed herself to show feeling of any sort, had been more perfumery than usual in her manner toward the lady. As for Millicent Tremont—well, Millicent had been too wrapped up in the task of making Bob forget the snub offered herself to show anything more than apprehension.

Still this didn't mean anything to the case. The Baroness von Wiese, Bim decided, had been what is called a "Man's woman"; one of those essentially primitive females who devote themselves to the art of fascinating men while they stir the hostility of members of their own sex by ignoring them. Perhaps the maid Jane could confirm this if she would; perhaps she could hear it out with many an exciting story. Would any of Jane's stories, Bim wondered, interest the police?

"Hey! Slave! Where to so bright and early in the morning?" said Carey.

How could Jane, the quiet, self-contained—she permitted herself the merest flicker of a smile when she said "After all, the Baroness was a lady"—be induced to talk?

Suppositions Galore

Jane might, certainly, have something to say if Bim were to inquire the cause of the slash on her shoulder and the carefully concealed abrasion on her temple. Bim had no doubt that these were the result of a encounter with the Baroness; she had no doubt that there had been a wrangle in the dressing room even as the maid Imogene had declared. Imogene was malicious but also she was rather stupid; her imagination, Bim judged, would be inadequate to the task of imagining such a scene and then reporting it convincingly.

Supposing, Bim mused, there had been a quarrel between the Baroness and her maid for any cause whatever, perhaps because the Baroness did not fancy her coiffure, as Jane had admitted. And supposing that the Baroness had wrathfully discharged Jane, as Imogene stated. Supposing Jane's calmness—surely the maid would remain the lady which obviously her mistress would not—so infuriated the Baroness that she flew at the girl and struck her a blow which sent her reeling. And supposing that the Baroness, frightened by what she had done, rushed out and slammed the door. It all seemed very graphic, very logical, and it bore out Imogene's story excepting as Imogene had insisted that both women were "going it something fierce." This, though, probably was pure malice. Well, then, supposing all this had happened.

Bim tried to picture the incident. In her mind's eye she saw the beautiful Baroness who was not so beautiful with her face contorted by fury, rush at the maid and strike her full in the face. No—that wouldn't have happened; the girl, seeing the blow about to fall would have moved aside instinctively. The blow would catch her, perhaps on the cheek, off balance. She would go down and—and, why yes! The blood stain on the corner of the low-boy—her head had struck there! It would have been a horrible crack; a wound it didn't fracture her skull. She would have fallen and laid on the floor unconscious.

The Baroness perhaps would have experienced a moment of panic. Seeing what she had done and perhaps believing the maid to be dying, she was not, however, stayed by any humane impulse. She rushed out and slammed the door, leaving the injured girl to die alone or to come out of her faint as best she could. The Baroness rushed out and then went calmly about the business of being Em Hardy's guest of honor, flitting with Mary Frost's husband snubbing Bob Trent's wife.

And the maid Jane... Perhaps she lay there a long time, coming back to consciousness slowly. Then very likely, she pulled herself together, stumbled down the back stairs for a hot cup of coffee. Confused and ill, it would have been easy for her to mistake the doors in the narrow back hallway and to have stepped into the butler's pantry instead of the kitchen.

Then, as she pushed through the swing door and came face to face with the Baroness standing there, beside William the butler, the sudden sight of her tormentor together with the nervous shock she had undergone probably combined to plunge her into hysteria—sent her screaming up the stairs and into the dressing room where she might hide temporarily.

Reasonable Enough

It all seemed reasonable enough. Indeed it might have been that the Baroness, worried beneath her haughty indifference by the possibility of a dead maid, had come into the house to send William, or some pretext to her apartment in order, should such a necessity arise, of implicating him. The Baroness, Bim felt sure, was capable of just such a cold-blooded gesture.

But why, if this were the cause, did William not say so? Why, instead, did he insist that the Baroness merely was ordering her milk for her night table—the order he admitted had slipped his mind? Or was this, that the Baroness' excuse to get William into her apartment before she herself appeared there? But would she have put her hand on William's arm and talked so earnestly about hot milk? Would he have witted so?

And why, also, did not Jane tell this story if it happened to be a true account?

Bim found it rather easy to answer this last question. Jane was nobody's fool; she realized that confessing to a furious quarrel with the murdered woman would draw attention if not actual suspicion to herself and she considered it discreet to remain as inconspicuous as possible. The chances were that she had a reason for this; that she even, perhaps, had her own suspicions. But there, it was plain, she meant to keep to herself. If one were able to win the confidence of Jane—to get her talking about her late mistress!

All at once Bim realized that she was back in the village. She paused on a street corner, undecided whether to go at once to the station house and make a report to Walter of what she had learned from Mary Frost and what she suspected about the maid Jane, when her arms were seized from behind and a gay voice yelled into her ear.

"Hey, slave! Where to so bright and early in the morning?" Been slipping it over on your Uncle Carl? How's for breakfast?"

Insulin Makes Surgery Possible for Diabetics

Treatment Has Lessened the Danger of Emergency Surgery in Persons with Diabetes, Says Authority, Advising Avoidance of Infections.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D., United States Senator from New York, Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

RECENTLY I wrote about diabetes and the great strides that have been made in the treatment of this disease. You will recall that I spoke of the horrors and complications that in former days were so commonly associated with this ailment.

Today I want to tell you a bit more about this condition. I have in mind particularly the surgical aspects.

Formerly, anyone with diabetes and having a condition that really required surgery was denied its application.

Only the most urgent surgery was done on diabetics and this only when there was no other alternative. When they were operated upon for such conditions as appendicitis or gall bladder disease, the situation was most precarious.

Today, however, the situation is entirely different. The surgery which was formerly denied is now being performed with great success.

With the introduction of insulin the modern remedy for diabetes, radical changes have resulted. Emergency surgery, as well as operative surgery, can now be accomplished with a high degree of safety. All this has been made possible by the discovery of insulin.

However, it must not be overlooked that infections in persons who have diabetes are more serious than in otherwise normal individuals. The vitality is lowered and the resistance is below normal.

In view of the increased amount of sugar found in the blood, infections in such persons play great havoc. Somehow, the body is not able to take care of the infection and healing is slow or absent.

Injuries and bruises, so far as possible must at all times be avoided. It is important that infection be recognized early. No diabetics must consider any abrasion or infection as being unimportant.

The diabetic should make particular effort to maintain a clean, healthy skin. This can be accomplished by using a mild soap and water. Proper treatment should be given to any wound or sore.

I wish to impress upon you the importance of early recognition of infections and surgical diseases in the diabetic. Early operation is the best way to escape serious complications.

GOOD WEATHER

a good stand of wheat, and a plentiful supply of early-sown oats, Prof. Lewis thinks.

The use of cereal crops, such as oats, wheat, barley and rye, to confront the 1931 hay shortage, was particularly recommended by the university soils department in recent instructions issued to farmers.

"Cereal crop yields probably will be larger than ordinary crops of clover and mixed hay if harvested at the proper time," the farm bulletin said.

Oats rank first, with wheat second, and barley, which may be cut for hay, is least desirable of all, except late-cut rye, the department said.

Seriousness of the situation in the drought-hit part of the state was pointed out in another part of the bulletin which noted that 71 per cent of spring seedlings of grass and legume crops were lost or parched last August.

While farmers are worrying about their crops, thousands of Ohio home gardeners soon will be turning backyards and vacant lots into plots where they will raise fresh vegetables.

As soon as the soil can be worked, specialists point out, it is a good idea to plant such vegetables as radishes, lettuce, carrots, early turnips, cabbage, kohlrabi, early Irish potatoes, peas, onion sets, and seed, beets, parsnips, salsify, spinach and parsley. These crops are cool season crops and are best planted early.

A trial planting of Golden Bantam sweet corn may be planted just after the first planting of peas, radishes and lettuce. If it is injured by frost the loss will be but little and if it matures there will be lots of sweet, juicy ears in July. To insure a continuous supply until the frost of October, it is best to plant sweet corn about every week or ten days until July 4.

Early Alaska peas may be planted first and followed almost at once with the sweeter, higher quality wrinkled type of peas.

Two weeks after the first planting in the garden, string beans may be planted with reasonable safety. Stringless green pods are best and they should be planted every 10 days until about July 4. However, it is a poor practice to plant tomatoes early as they are a warm season crop.

See Hollywood For The Craziest Clothes In U.S.

NEW YORK—For the looniest clothes in these United States of America, see Hollywood, California.

Yeah, it's the movie people. The outfits they get up are a caution. And not just their screen clothes. Their every-day street duds are real lulu.

These examples are presented: Jack Oakie—His ordinary get-up includes patent leather shoes, sweat shirt, flannel trousers, and no hat. That goes for Hollywood Boulevard, the tennis courts or the studio.

Clive Brook—One of the best dressed men in the movie colony, wouldn't think of wearing a suit twice unless it was freshly pressed, but insists on a cap pulled low over the left eye.

Norma Shearer—Cuckoo about beads; has them made to order for each costume.

Now Fancy This! Clara Bow—Virtually lives in sports pajamas; rides to the studio in them, prances around the lot in them; in the summer even ventures forth to the thoroughfares in them. Spurns hats.

Billie Dove—Chooses eighteen or so hats at the beginning of the season, all of them shaped alike but different in color; then she picks gowns to match the hats.

Bob Montgomery—Wears a yellow scarf instead of a collar. Estelle Taylor—Dresses normally days, but insists on long sleeved night dresses at night; if she receives a sleeveless night dress as a gift, and likes it, she has sleeves added.

Dorothy Lee—Hates stockings; barelegged when she was married to Jimmy Fidler; given to kicking off her shoes.

Dick Barthelmess—Likes a top hat so well he wears one even to some informal functions.

END OF RACKETEERING

Raskob predicted that if liquor control is brought back to the states racketeering will disappear. He said that if the dries are sincere they have nothing to fear in allowing the people to decide the liquor problem. A conservative estimate of the revenue the government could get from liquor, he said, would collected on personal income taxes, including surtaxes. In other words, if the government could impose a modest tax on liquor now sold illicitly the citizens of the country could be relieved from the payment of federal personal income taxes, and the $900,000,000 thus released annually to business extensions and constructive enterprises.

Mary Pickford Orders End Of Films At Death

NEW YORK.—When Mary Pickford dies, her films will die with her.

Already she is buying up her old pictures for the purpose of destroying them.

She doesn't want to be remembered by them. The little film star, now facing forty, tells about her decision in an exceptionally frank interview in the course of which she even touches on the recurring rumors that all is not well between herself and Douglas Fairbanks, her husband.

"I am adding a codicil to my will," she says, "which provides that when I go, my films go with me. They are to be destroyed. I would rather be a beautiful illusion in the minds of people than a horrible example in celluloid. I pleased my own generation. That is all that matters."

"Pictures have progressed. My pictures soon will be old-fashioned. It is marvelous for me to remember 'Daddy Long Legs.' I do not want to see it. I am more happy in the memory of it than I was in the success of it."

"Not now" is what she has to say about the possibility of separation between Doug and herself.

"We are two normal human beings who like each other very much," she explains. "In six months or six years, how can I say, in this peculiar, shifting weird nightmare of a world, what will happen? I cannot deny that there may be a separation. I can only say there is none now. Just a vacation."

"I haven't half as much money as people credit to me. But I have enough to live comfortably. Conservatively, I have lost two millions that I might have saved on productions. That is conservative."

"I am spending more money today. I am buying more expensive clothes. I am taking pleasure in being smartly dressed. Life is very short. Why shouldn't I spend and enjoy now that I have earned it?"

Under her contract with United Artists, Miss Pickford must do one more picture. Whether she makes any more is problematical. She would rather retire than make a bad one, she says.

TILBY SMITH ON TRIAL APRIL 27

JEFFERSON, O.—Date for the retrial of Tilby Smith, 27, accused wife-slayer, has been set for April 27, in common pleas court of Ash-tabula-co.

Smith appeared before Judge Charles R. Sargent to hear the date set and announced that he would waive trial by jury and that his plea of not guilty by reason of insanity would be used in his second hearing. The waiver of jury trial was accepted by the court and testimony in the case will be heard by Judge Sargent.

The young Ashtabula truck driver previously was convicted by a jury here on charges of complicity in the murder of his wife, Clara, who was killed last May 29. He was granted a re-trial by the state supreme court on the grounds that the trial court erred in refusing to permit the accused man to waive trial by jury.

Mrs. Maud Lowther, part-Indian girl, accused by the state as being the actual trigger-wielder in the murder, will go on trial upon the conclusion of Smith's second hearing. Prosecutor Howard M. Nazor has indicated.
